Application writing

An admissions or application essay, sometimes also called a personal statement or a statement of purpose, is an essay or other written statement written by an applicant, often a prospective student applying to some college, university, or graduate school. The application essay is a common part of the university and college admissions process.

Some applications may require one or more essays to be completed, while others make essays optional or supplementary. Essay topics range from very specific to open-ended.

Types of Application writing

- 1) Classical Application
- 2) Online Application
- 3) Brief Application
- 4) Unsolicited Application

Job Application Writing

A job application letter (also known as a cover letter) is a letter you send with your resume to provide information on your skills and experience. This letter is your chance to "sell" yourself to an employer, explaining why you are an ideal candidate for a position. When you write your job application letter, it's essential to pay close attention to formatting. There's a right way to format a cover letter; deviate from the standard guidelines and hiring managers may drop you from consideration.

In fact, anything that makes your job application letter appear less than professional can prevent hiring managers from taking you seriously as a candidate. Make sure your cover letter is formatted properly and is free from errors before you send.

Importance of Job Application writing

One of the key issues in job application writing is the cover letter or letter of introduction. The question of a cover letter came up recently with one client who wanted to know if they should write a cover letter (or more to the point have us write them a cover letter) when applying for a vacant position. A well crafted cover letter is generally vital in applying for any job UNLESS the application requirements specifically state they do not want a cover letter and just the Resume, or CV

Uses of Job Application writing

Your cover letter matters, and yes, you need to include one in your job application. So we've revamped our cover letter and resume writing tips for 2021 to help you get a job in today's challenging job market. Our must-follow advice will help you learn how to write a cover letter that earns you more interviews

Guidelines for writing Job Application writing

1. Make it easy to read (and match it with your resume)
2. Keep it to a single page
3. Write unique cover letters for each company

Types of Job Application writing

- ❖ Resume
- ❖ Curriculum Vitae (CV)
- ❖ Bio-data

Objective of Project

The main object of this project is of expressing us to any of the higher department in a correct and also in the way which we are expressed very much nice and easy way. Bio-data, Resume and Curriculum Vitae (CV) is written for expressing our all achievements and goals in our life. By understanding how to write Application writing we can express ourself to the the recruiter. Career objective or resume objective acts as the pitch of your resume. It mentions the goal and objective of your career. Even though it is not a strict requirement to include a resume objective in your resume, a well-written objective can help you catch the attention of the recruiter. But, before you build that powerful resume and start applying, make sure you know ways to find a great place to work.

Main objectives of Application writing

The objective of an application letter is to attract the attention of an employer. It acts as a cover letter for your resume and should provide enough personal information to convince the reader to grant you an interview.

The Curriculum Vitae, CV, or resume is one of the most important documents for a professional. Whereas the resume is so important because it tends to be a single document that informs everyone interested about all the facts related to the professional life of the individual. Some companies prefer hard copy or soft copy but most of the well – reputed MNC's prefer your resume inform of both hard copy as well as soft copy.

The most effective objective is one that is tailored to the job you are applying for. It states what kind of career you are seeking, and what skills and experiences you have that make you ideal for that career. A resume objective might also include where you have been and where you want to go in your career. The main objective of this project is of getting intouch with the various job Application forms like Resume Bio-data and Curriculum Vitae (CV)

Theme of Resume CV Bio-Data

- A Resume

A Resume is used by the people applying for jobs with specific skills essential to that particular job with specific skills essential to that particular job

- A Curriculum Vitae (CV)

A Curriculum Vitae (CV) is used by people seeking the career change. A CV will be in generalized format; hence it is mostly used for general purposes

- A Bio-data

A Bio-data is typical form that can be used for particular perspectives. People applying for Government jobs or research grants usually prepares the bio-data to give the brief information of themselves

Purpose of Project

- Purpose of writing Curriculum Vitae, Bio-data and Resume.

Purpose of writing Curriculum Vitae (CV)

Purpose of writing CV is not to always get a job but It is to arrange an interview. The main objective of CV is to communicate to the recruiter that this job is the logical result of your career path. Purpose of CV is to evoke the desire to meet you and your all skills. It means Your CV is Not the place to demonstrate what you are looking for .It shows that why are you perfect candidate to give job to you and choose you for that post.

Purpose of writing a Bio-data

Bio-data is an abbreviation for the term biographical data. The Purpose of writing a Bio-data is to express ourself in a clear way and in very small format and also in very less time . It is used for employment purpose also for marriage purpose they are very much useful for explaining our date of birth, gender, marital status, religion, height, complexion, father's name, etc

Purpose of writing a Resume

Following are the purposes of writing an Resume

- ❖ To Introduce one to prospective employers
- ❖ To Provide a snapshot of one's career in a clear way
- ❖ To Impress ourself to the prospective employers
- ❖ To Demonstrate your communication skills

Resume

A resume (or résumé, from French “to sum up”) is a short, concise document used for job applications in the US and Canada. The purpose of a resume is to provide recruiters with a brief overview of the candidate’s work history. A good resume should be targeted at a specific job and one to two pages long.

Types of resume

1. Chronological Resume
2. Functional or Skills-based Resume
3. Combination Resume

1. Chronological resume

This type of resume affords you the opportunity to give pride of place to your most recent and outstanding talents, skills, and expertise, ensuring that a hiring manager will be interested enough to read through your entire resume.

When to Use a Chronological Resume

Chronological resume are the most commonly used format, and for good reason. Most employers prefer candidates who have current or very recent experience in their career fields.

The more experienced a potential new employee is, the less likely it will be that the employer will have to spend time and money to train them after they’re hired.

2. Functional or Skills-based Resume

A functional resume is a type of resume format which showcases skills over experience. The purpose of a functional resume is to draw attention to transferable abilities rather than focusing on a chronological overview of your work history.

The biggest difference between a functional resume and a standard chronological resume is that a functional resume groups your experience under skill categories instead of job titles. Under each skill category, bullet points are used to highlight examples of your skills, and those examples can come from both work and life experiences.

Emphasizing your skills rather than your career progression, the functional resume format is great for career changers, job seekers with employment gaps, and people with highly developed skill sets.

3. Combination resume

A combination resume is a format that marries the best aspects of a chronological resume format and a functional resume format. A chronological resume focuses on the candidate's work experience; a functional resume on skills. A combination resume uses both work history and skills to capture the employer's attention.

This hybrid resume allows you to highlight both your work experience AND skills in a single resume, making your professional background shine!

Curriculum Vitae

Curriculum Vitae or Commonly known as CV or Vita is a short written summary of a person's career, qualifications and education . This use of the term for such a short summary is most common everywhere. The term curriculum vitae (and its short form CV) is also used especially in academia to refer to very extensive or even complete summaries of person's career, qualifications and education including publications and other information. This has caused widespread misconception that is incorrect to refer to short CVs .Short CVs are also called as Resume .In many Countries a short CV is typically the first Information that a potential employer receives from a job seeker and is typically used to screen applicants, often followed by an Interview.

CVs may also be requested for applicants to postsecondary programs, Scholarships, grants, and bursaries . In the 2010s it became popular for applicants to provide an electronic version of their CV to employers using email, an online employment website or a job-oriented social- networking service website for example Linked in

General usage of CV

In general usage in all English-speaking countries, a CV is short (usually of two or more papers) and therefore contains only a summary of job seeker's employment history, qualifications, education and some personal information. Some types of CVs also require applicants photos, date of birth, and most recent salary information .CVs are often tailored to change the emphasis of the information according to the particular position for which the job seeker is applying. A CV can also be extended to include an extra page for the jobseeker's publications if these are important for the job

In academia

In academic and medical careers a CV is usually a comprehensive document that provides extensive information on education , publications and other achievements Such a CV is generally used when applying for a position in academia while shorter CVs are generally used when applying for a position in industry, non-profit organizations and the public sector

A standard format of a CV for job should include the following points:

- ✓ Contact information
- ✓ Personal Statement
- ✓ Academic history
- ✓ Key skills and Qualifications
- ✓ Industry Awards
- ✓ Professional Certification's
- ✓ Publications
- ✓ Professional Affiliations

- ✓ Conferences Attended
- ✓ Additional Training

Types of Curriculum Vitae

There are three types of Curriculum Vitae (CV)

- 1)The Chronological CV
- 2)The Functional CV
- 3)The Combined CV

1)The Chronological CV

Sometimes referred to as traditional CV, a chronological CV is one of the most common types of CV used by recent graduates. Presented in reverse chronological order it displays your most recent experience and achievements first. Your employment and work experience is usually on the front page, listed in reverse Chronological order.

Templates used in Chronological CV

- 1)Your Name
- 2)Your Address
- 3)Your Email id, phone number and Linked in profile(optional)

2)The Functional CV

A Functional CV is skills based and is written, focused and places more emphasis on showing your work experience, Knowledge and expertise. It is developed and organized by your individual skills rather than your previous job titles or chronology

Templates used in Functional CV

- 1)Name and all personal details
- 2)Education
- 3)Work experience
- 4)Activities and Interests

3)The Combination CV

A Combination CV is a mixture of a Chronological and a skills- based/functional CV .Essentially, it's chronological CV with a key skills or core competencies section at top .This is ideal if you want to emphasise your key skills and particularly good if you're changing fields entirely

- 1)Professional profile
- 2)Skills
- 3)Working Experience

4)Education

5)Other Information

What is Biodata

Biodata is a term which split up into two words bio and data, imparts what all it is; bio directly connotes the biology or the whole surrounding which is encompassed by the particular individual and the description in detail articulated in attractive format and layout. It encloses the details mainly about your biological information which comprises all numbers height, weight and date of birth along with gender, skin colour, caste, religion, permanent address, education, occupation, etc

How is it different from CV and Resume?

When an entrant says that isn't the CV, resume and biodata are moreover same as for them it is like a new term popped up in their life. Unlike them, professional know the difference and entrants who are too keen to get into profession understand what all they mean.

A biodata is based on factual information of an individual like name, date of birth, family details, gender, address, contact information, education details, etc.

A resume is more focused towards the professional and job oriented details like qualification and organisational scan with minimum and required personal snippet in not more than two pages.

Whereas CV - a curriculum vitae is a more detailed one and mostly used by the fresher's who wants to explain their whole academia and notable achievements. Unlike these two, biodata is usually shown biographical details of a person..

What does biodata include?

It more often than not describes the person the best and full biography of the person, so the other one gets all in one go. It is like a biodata which covers details like:

- Name
- Date of birth
- Height
- Weight
- Complexion
- Education
- Habits (drinking/smoking)
- Father's name along with his educational qualification, where he works/worked.
Where does he live currently and where are they settled?
- Mother's name, and is she working/housewife?
- The number of sibling along with their marital status, i.e. Married or single? Where do they work and reside? What does your brother-in-law or sister-in-law do?
- Horoscope: generation and matching the match

In broad term, biodata contains more information about your details. Biodata is generally helpful for marriage proposals in India.

Types of biodata

- Personal biodata : A biodata focuses on personal particulars in addition to educational and professional experience. It typically includes detailed personal information such as date of birth, gender, religion, race, nationality, marital status, residence, parents' names, names of your children and siblings, languages spoken, etc.

- Educational biodata : Educational biodata refers to information about a person's education. It profiles the educational qualification and background of an individual.

- Job biodata : Biodata, short for biographical data, is a one- to three-page document you use when applying for a job. Your biodata summarizes most aspects of your life, including personal details, education, skills and work experience.

- Marriage biodata : A marriage biodata is a concise document that summarises key information about the person who is looking to get married. ... A marriage biodata usually includes information such as name, age, date of birth, religion/caste, names and professions of parents, education, profession, salary, and expectations.

Conclusion

The Project Comparative study between Resume, Bio-data and CV conclude us in this project we came to know the actual difference and similarities between Resume Bio-data and CV. Also the unusual term regarding these three can also be understood. Resume is a summary of educational skills and used for employment To apply for a new job it should be usually one or two pages only whereas CV is more detailed and structured than resume it can be longer as per requirements And the last Bio-data is our self biographical data which reflect on piece of paper. It relates to only Individual things such as name Gender, date of birth, Nationality, Residence, income etc The case study on this project is really helps too not only discard my misunderstanding about the CV, Resume, and Bio-data but also it opens a door of actual structure of these 3 such as how they are written? what are the types of Resume? and how to build them stronger etc
